Majority of county councillors will run

By Dale Lemay
Five of seven incumbent County of Parkland councillors will be seeking re-election come October 15, the date of the next municipal elections.

Ivan Vovk (Division 7), Maurice McCullagh (Division 8), George Mann (Division 5), Ken Fehr (Division 3) and Reece Les Miller (Division 2) all told the Western Review last week that they will be seeking positions of councillors again.

Councillor George Miller of Division 2 said that he will be making an official announcement later this week, and Division 1 councillor Leslie Lemstra could not be reached for comment.

Mr. Vovk, who lives in Drayton, said that while he hadn't made up his mind for sure, he'll "probably be running again."

Regarding the possible losses to the incumbency campaign, Mr. Vovk noted that he hasn't been out to talk with residents of the division.

"I won't be able to identify what the losses are and have a chance to meet with the people," he said.

However, when asked about two major developments within the county—first representation of the county's application for subdivision approving authority to Mr. Vovk had first been on them.

"I (subdivision approving authority) may cause more headaches than it is worth. It will be an improvement over the present system," he said.

"The way things are going now with the Edmonton Regional Planning Commission, ERPC, having that kind of a subdivision application, it's not too good because we don't have much input into what is going on in our area."

Mr. Vovk said that the county's decision to have first representation in each of Divisions 1, 2 and 3 was not necessary, and added that "things should have been left the way they are."

"More members on the board will just mean the more time will be taken in council meetings, everybody will have to leave their day, and it will take a lot more time to get things done."

Heaters in the three eastern divisions of the county will need one additional councillor, said in a by-election, to be held later in the fall.

Mr. McCullagh, who will be making his fourth term as Division 8 councillor, said he has never liked the idea of re-election, since he saw gravel crusher," he said.

"I've been to the council for four years ago, the boundaries committee (of the provincial government) recommended that more representation be added to the west of the county."

"Now the next is putting the deal councillors (that) and the next is getting something at all," he said.

Mr. McCullagh noted that

Premier says federal tax would amount to war

By Dale Lemay
Premier Peter Lougheed Saturday confirmed his commitment to fight a takeover of provincial resources by the federal government as he warned that any attempt by Ottawa to impose a natural gas export tax would be a "declaration of war against western Canada ... and would be so resisted."

Mr. Lougheed, speaking to the Canadian Community Newspapers Association convention in Edmonton, said that for too long Alberta has been on "the short end of the stick" as far as federal taxes and economic issues were concerned.

"For 70 years, Alberta has played by the rules of the federal government, and it certainly hasn't helped us," he said.

"Now, for a short time, the rules favor Alberta, and Ottawa wants to change the rules, and changing the rules in the middle of the game is not fair."

Mr. Lougheed, in his strongest statement since oil pricing talks with the federal government broke down a month ago, said that his proposition to charge 75 per cent of the North American price for Alberta's crude oil would improve Canada's self-sufficiency.

Chamber launches rejuvenation program

By Mark Chastard
A "rejuvenation" of the Drayton Valley Chamber of Commerce is under way with the help of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce.

A "rejuvenation" session to take place in Edmonton is being organized, to be followed by a dinner meeting and a recruitment drive for new Chamber members. New projects such as an entrance sign for Drayton Valley and a pamphlet promoting the town are also being planned.

Members of the Chamber were in Edmonton last Wednesday to discuss problems with Jack Chesser, general manager of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce, who has offered his assistance and volunteers team to bring new life to people," he said, adding that he helped a number of community Chambers of Commerce experiencing difficulties and his "system has never been in the past."

The rejuvenation program being planned with help from two residents which

Most county councillors will seek re-election

the roads cost about 18 cents per gallon, and now the same gallon of oil is costing us nearly 90 cents."

According to George Mann, Division 6 councillor, the biggest issue this time around will be the proposed annexation by the City of Edmonton of some 40,000 acres of county territory.

"If Edmonton annexes that much territory, we will lose a great deal of our assessment in the end and, and that will result in a large decrease in our tax revenue," he said.

He also noted that the decrease in population that will result if the annexation bid is approved will hurt the county as far as per capita grants are concerned.

Mr. Mann said that the dual representation council is considering would only cause problems in the operation of the county.

"I don't know what the other problems will be, but I do know that if we get more councillors in there, it will be harder to function because there will be more people to please on any given issue."

He said that a county council of 10 members and a school board of 20 members that will result from the increased representation will only make it harder to handle the affairs of the two bodies.

"The more people it takes to make a decision, the harder it becomes to please everyone."

Other issues which Mr. Mann sees as being important in the upcoming elections are ones concerning the school board and the problem with garbage disposal.

"There are a lot of problems with the school board right now, and the trustees have to deal with some fairly involved questions regarding school expansion."

He said that the decision whether to locate new schools in towns or in the county was one of the problems faced by the school board.

Mr. Mann noted that the method of handling garbage in the county would have to be improved, before it got out of hand.

"I am not too happy with the way the situation is being handled right now, and more changes will have to be made."

He did not offer any solutions to the problem.

Steve Lay, Mr. Mann's brother, said that he fully intends to run again, but he added that he didn't see any problems or issues that might be debated.

"There really doesn't have to be an issue to have an election. The people who are currently on council decide whether they want to do it, again, and anybody who thinks he can do a better job than the fellow already in can run against him," he said.

Mr. Miller, recently elected as president of the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties, said that he has become quite involved in the running of the county, and he thinks the position is in.

"I have become quite involved. I feel I have a lot to contribute to this county, and that is why I am running again."

Ken Pahr, councillor for Division 4 and assistant member of county council, says he intends to run again for his first full term as councillor.

Mr. Pahr replaced Keith Mord as Division 4 councillor in February of this year.

"At this time, I really don't know of any issues, or even if there will be any real big issues," Mr. Pahr said.

He did say, however, that the idea of dual representation was not a good one, and he added that the present set up is adequate.

"We just don't need more than seven councillors, and I don't see how they need the representation will be any better with 10 than it is with seven," he said.

"We don't work as individuals on council; we work together for the good of all county residents, not just for residents in one division or another."

More than half of coins sold

Over half of the 5,000 new coins sold in the Drayton Valley Chamber of Commerce have been sold, reported Chamber member Jim Knudsen last week.

The Chamber has been selling 50 cents to businesses in Drayton Valley with the arrangement that if any coins are left at the end of the year (when the coins are no longer legal tender), the Chamber will refund the businesses.

Well over 2,000 coins have been sold already, says Mr.

Knudsen. One letter asking about the coins came all the way from South Africa, he said.

The coins have an Alberta side and the towns of Drayton Valley's logo on the other side.

News reports corrected

Contrary to a report in last week's issue of the Western Review, Mike O'Connell did not sign a petition objecting to the paving of the 5th Street alley and cul-de-sac.

The O'Connell family, dated June 20, to the news saying it did not object to the paving although the company was no need for it.

"We wanted to stay neutral in the matter," says Roy Anderson, production representative of Mike O'Connell in Drayton Valley.

Our Opinion

"Men are never so close to the truth as when they discuss it freely."—Lord Macaulay

Contradictions

Four of seven county of Parkland councillors went on record this week saying they are against the proposed dual representation for Divisions 1, 2 and 3 in the eastern half of the county.

To say the least, we were surprised. At the July 17 meeting of council a motion was passed, with only councillor Maurice McCulloch voting against, to ask the minister of Municipal Affairs if he would "favorably entertain" dual representation in those divisions. Reeve Miller and councillors Lenorthe, G. Miller, Fuhr, Mann and Vork voted in favor of the motion.

In our interview this week, councillors Fuhr, Vork, Mann and McCulloch say they are against the idea—it would bring too many councillors and create more work.

So why did they vote in favor of the July 17th motion?

Admittedly, the motion did not say the councillors were in favor of dual representation, but why ask the minister to "entertain favorably" dual representation if the majority of council does not like the idea?

Furthermore, what happens if Edmonton succeeds in its annexation bid and dual representation is accepted by the minister sometime after the fall election?

All of a sudden we will have two more councillors in two divisions which have had a large chunk of their population and land removed.

We suggest the county re-evaluate the idea of dual representation. And councillors should publicly explain why they vote one way in council and make opposite comments to the press.

It's no time to play political games just before an election.

Chamber

It may fail or it may succeed—it's too early to tell, but we have nothing but praise for the rejuvenation program launched last week by the Drayton Valley Chamber of Commerce.

For too long the Chamber has been dragging its feet, barely surviving, with its meetings noteworthy only for the lack of attendance.

And now it looks, at long last, as if an organized body with a determined executive, will be formed with the support and generous assistance of Jack Chesney, general manager of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce.

What many people don't seem to realize is that a powerful Chamber of Commerce speaking for the business community of Drayton Valley can only improve the town, bring better services and more people, all of which will improve the commercial life of the town.

The matter is really quite simple—if the town's businessmen refuse to get involved, there will be no rejuvenation and it will be Drayton Valley's loss. If they join and commit themselves the town will have a new, powerful force working for its betterment.

WE HAVE NO INTENTION WHATSOEVER OF WEAKENING OUR OWN DOMESTIC MARKET TO SUPPORT AUTOMOBILE SALES WHICH ARE HEAVILY SUBSIDIZED AND UNDERWRITTEN!

Reviewpoint By Dale Lunan

If anything can be said about Premier Peter Lougheed's speech to the Canadian Community Newspapers Association (CCNA) it would have to be that he knew how to pick an audience.

What better place to discuss what if Ontario happens a natural gas export than before a group of powerful weekly newspaper publishers, the majority of them from Ontario, that had been of liberalism and reform (Lougheedism)?

It was the blue-eyed chief's first major speech since the oil pricing talks broke down a month ago, and while others (B.C. Premier Bill Bennett, for one) have said basically the same thing, I think Lougheed's message of approval and endorsement to make the thoughts sink in.

I almost expected a minor riot when he made his statement, or at least a few catcalls and boos.

Instead, the majority of the publishers in attendance merely took down a note and agreed, or at least nodded their heads in respectful agreement, or at least said they would "make any kind of statement until they all get home, surrounded in their warm beds of federal government support."

I can just say the officials and commentators they will come out with.

Some will say that the speech proved once again that the world is composed of a bunch of idiots, content to take in their royalties from the oil wells in their backyard.

Others may say that, yes, Lougheed's radio-casting is all well and good, but what can he really do about the issue?

He surely won't declare war against us, will he? Well, that thought is most disconcerting, and he probably won't take up arms against the west, but the point of his whole speech was to scare the pants off Trudeau and his cabinet.

With the first ministers' conference only days away, and constitutional talks only a few weeks after heading into the fray.

Whether that attention will be enough to ward off Trudeau's attempts to grab some of the energy revenues of this country remains to be seen, but Lougheed has given everyone fair warning of the possible consequences of such a move.

It's now up to the east, and Trudeau, to come up with an alternative that will be acceptable to all parties.

Farmers' problems

By W. Roger Worth

Farmers are quick to complain about rising food prices, many times blaming Canada's farmers. Yet most city dwellers simply fail to understand the problems and risks involved in producing the crops that allow Canadians to spend less on food than people in most other countries.

Even now, farmers are getting set for the barrage of criticism that is bound to follow expected food price increases as a result of this year's disastrous drought in western Canada.

Here's what's happening in the west as the agricultural community attempts to contend with hardship created by the drastic price increase in 1979.

• This year's wheat crop will be down 33 to 50 per cent compared to 1979, probably driving up the price of many foodstuffs 15 to 20 per cent.

• Many farmers have already plowed under crops and resseeded with livestock feeds such as grain and corn. Now they are praying these crops won't be killed by an early frost.

• There is the best beauty here being selling off parts of their herds at rock-bottom prices because they can't feed or afford to feed the animals. This has driven down beef prices for consumers, but in the longer term prices are bound to rise.

• Dairy farmers are in a real bind. They are forced to pay as much as $3 for a bale of hay that normally sells for $1, making many operations money-losing propositions.

A lot of comment has been made about the price of crop insurance and other government subsidies. That's a myth. Such programs normally cover only the cost of fertilizers and chemicals needed to produce the crop.

In fact, it is clear that many western farmers will lose their farms, if not their lives, in this year of the drought.

All this happens on it should be, with these in the agriculture because everything here seems to be a bad year.

All Canadian consumers should keep this summer's problems in mind when food prices rise. For if farming doesn't remain a profitable endeavor, we will all suffer.

Stan Schellenberger, MP

Price hike is a stop-gap measure

The recent announcement by the Alberta government to uniformly increase the regulated price of domestic crude by $2 a barrel is only a stop-gap measure.

It is more necessary for the federal government's unwilling attitude in the energy negotiations. The $2 increase may be a responsible and reasonable one and clearly makes the federal government to act in a similar manner to have talks.

A similar action with the Alberta government's position in these energy talks and hence can understand why the Premier has turned down the totally unacceptable offers made by the federal government.

The $2 increase will come into effect until October 1, translates into 1.5 cents per litre or 7 cents a gallon. From the $2 increase, the federal government will take its usual 10 per cent share of 20 cents leaving 10 cents or 45 per cent to the oil companies.

But the increase does little toward the development of new oil supplies. It does increase the real dilemma of how to develop enough domestic oil in the face of an increasing world price to see it through the transition from a petroleum-dependent economy to one based on other energy sources.

For example, Alberta's new proposed heavy oil plants will be delayed until the developers have exactly what they will receive for their synthetic oil and whether their costs will be reasonable. It is something they cannot sell at a price that will provide for the future but also provide for the present.

These plants will not only make cheaper prices for Canadians in the future but also provide jobs and manufacturing contracts throughout Canada. The federal government could also gain additional revenue by taxing what it considers to be income profits by these companies.

However, Ottawa is in the pricing process. Not just the oil but the gas prices. The federal government has to be able to generate more revenue to enable Canada to become a more self-sufficient nation.

The federal government should be able to generate more revenue to enable Canada to become a more self-sufficient nation.

The federal government should be able to generate more revenue to enable Canada to become a more self-sufficient nation.

The federal government should be able to generate more revenue to enable Canada to become a more self-sufficient nation.

The federal government should be able to generate more revenue to enable Canada to become a more self-sufficient nation.

and short-lived petroleum subsidy program, for example, has caused the federal deficit to balloon to unprecedented levels. And the deficit will continue to grow until a sound energy policy is arrived at.

The producing provinces do not believe that it is solely their responsibility to pay off such federal indebtedness through revenue generated from their rapidly depleting natural resources. Rather, this money should be spent on things that will benefit all Canadians now and in the future.

The federal government would do well to reconsider the comprehensive energy proposals we put forward in our budget last year. Not only was an oil agreement with Alberta inconsistent which would have encouraged domestic petroleum development and all the related spin-off benefits, but there were also measures aimed at winning the federal dollar.

Ottawa is currently working with two rapidly expanding industries as far as an energy agreement with Alberta is concerned. One is the September constitutional meeting and the other is the expected fall budget. Some agreement on energy prices should be reached by September or the first ministers' talks will get nowhere. The government must also include a comprehensive energy package in its budget to allow for long range economic planning.

Whatever the government's concerns, Canadians have been reasonably loyal yet another year without the security of an energy policy at a time when the international energy situation was at its most unstable.

More trustees bring more problems

By Joyce Colquhoun

Population increases of local towns and villages have opened four more trustees positions for the County of Parkland Board of Education this fall, but the new positions have also added to a problem which the board has been facing for years.

The county can't draw out more representatives on the school board from towns and villages than representatives from the county. With seven county councillors sitting or on the board, only seven trustees can vote at meetings at any one time.

Already this year, there have been eight trustees from towns and villages, one more than the number of county councillors. The problem has been solved by the eight trustees sitting on the board as a rotation basis.

With the increase of four more trustees after the fall election, the problem of a larger board and five trustees being on rotation will be discussed by the board officials.

Unless the county gets it straightened, which will be discussed in the legislature this fall, five school trustees will have to "sit out" or resign. They are still about the meetings, and they are encouraged to continue to discuss, but they are not allowed to vote.

"We are also afraid this will discourage people from running for office," says Mr. Byrd, secretary-treasurer for the school board. "We're willing to volunteer for a position like that."

Mr. Byrd said that this term, with two trustees being on rotation for a five-month period each, most trustees still attended most of the meetings.

"The one or two did not attend for five months," he says. "When you are away from meetings for that long, you lose touch with everything."

And the school board officials are concerned that with four more trustees on rotation next term, the effectiveness of the board will be cut down.

"The problem of rotation would be lessened if the County of Parkland gave approval from the government to add more county councillors to the board. That would increase the number of trustees to 15, and only two would be on rotation.

There would be fewer trustees rotating, but we'd have to add on to the board room," says Mr. Byrd. "I don't think that room can hold that number of people."

If the act is amended, 30 people would be on the board: 18 county councillors, and 10 representatives from the towns and villages.

Mr. Byrd said the larger the board grows, the longer it takes to reach decisions.

"There have been 14 people sitting on the board these past three years, and there is so much input from so many individuals, that even small matters are time consuming," he says.

In the meantime this fall, Drayton Valley and Stony Plain are eligible for one more trustee, bringing the representation up to three for each town. Williams and Edmonton have now qualified for one trustee each.

On the board, there will be three trustees from each of the three towns: Drayton Valley, Stony Plain and Spruce Grove, one trustee from Edworthy, Williams, and Edmonton School, as well as seven county councillors.

Cause of rig collapse unknown

The exact reason why a service rig collapsed near Leduc last week is still under review, says a spokesman for the company. The cause of the accident was the sudden ground at the site. Mr. Wain, official in charge of the company, says the cause of the accident was the sudden ground at the site.

Mr. Wain says the cause of the accident was the sudden ground at the site. The cause of the accident was the sudden ground at the site. The cause of the accident was the sudden ground at the site.

Mill rate should drop

Assessment may triple

Drayton Valley's assessment will jump "roughly" three times what it is now when a town of Municipal Affairs assessors breaks the town next February or March, says an official of the provincial assessment branch.

However, Jim Burdick of the assessment branch says taxes will remain relatively the same or decrease a little more, as the town council assessment will be based on the 60 per cent of the current rate.

The last general assessment was completed in 1975 based on that year's market values for the 1976 taxation year.

The new general assessment, which will "definitely" be completed in 1981, will shift most of the tax burden from residential property to commercial property, says Mr. Burdick.

At the time of the last general assessment, says Jim Pugh, secretary-treasurer for the town, commercial property was valued about the same as a residential property of the same size. But since then, he says, commercial property has increased in value faster than residential property.

"What is amazing is to see the new general assessment, the tax burden will be shifted somewhat from residential to commercial to correspond with current market values," says Mr.

the accident. He is suffering from multiple fractures of the ribs, the last back, and he also has a cracked skull. Both parents say if it weren't for the care of the rig workers on the site, their son would be dead. "They were smart enough to not move him until the ambulance came," said Mrs. Corgill.

Mr. Wain says he thinks better provisions could have prevented the accident from occurring. "With all that rain," he says.

New postal service within 6 months

Approximately 40 per cent of Drayton Valley's residents will have a new postal service within six months, says postmaster Joe Turcotte.

People living in certain areas of town, particularly in new subdivisions, will have group post boxes placed near their homes where they can go and pick up their mail.

Mr. Turcotte says eventually 80 boxes, containing 13 compartments each, will be installed throughout the town.

The new suburban delivery service will increase the service to the public, he says, by increasing the efficiency in the post office.

"There are 2,000 lock boxes (post boxes) in the post office right now, and there is a waiting list of nearly 100 people waiting for one," says Mr. Turcotte. "By just increasing the number of lock boxes, it's not practical. We don't have room. We have to go the delivery system."

Each group box will have two separate compartments, and each family, or customer, is assigned a separate compartment. People who will be using the new system will be asked to have their mail addressed according to their house and street number, says Mr. Turcotte.

Once group boxes are installed, possibly in six months, people will be asked to put a lock on their box.

Mr. Turcotte says the new delivery system will improve the service in the post office.

By having a number of people waiting to use the system, there will be room to accommodate people who do not live in the new delivery area who need post boxes. In addition, the general delivery system will be reduced, and it will take longer to sort through the mail.

Until the group boxes are installed, people now on general delivery who will be the future have the delivery system, will have their mail sorted into compartments which only include two addresses. This will be much faster than sorting through ten names in general delivery, says Mr. Turcotte.

The area of town which will come under the new delivery system, aside from all the new subdivisions, are Hillview, West Park, MacKenzie, and the Greenwood trailer park. All new subdivisions in the future will also come under the new delivery system.

3 trustees will, 2 won't run in October 15 election

By Jayne Creighton

At the October 15 elections this fall, three incumbent Parkland school board trustees are considering running again, two say definitely "no" and one is yet undecided.

Trustee Vi Belin from Drayton Valley says she will probably run for office this fall for her second term. Marlene MacKenzie, who has served on the board for two and a half terms, says she is going out of the race. "I think I've probably been on the board long enough," she says. "Some times when you're in it for so long, perhaps there is something that you're missing."

Margaret McHenry from Stony Plain and Gary Kinkay from Spruce Grove both say they are probably going to seek their second terms this fall. 50 Mayor of Stony Plain says he is definitely not running for election. "I have too much else to do," he says. "Somebody should run meered into another area. Since his resignation came, I have been asked to fill his seat immediately. Stony Plain trustees Margaret McHenry and Gary Kinkay from Spruce Grove say the job in time concerning, but he adds trustees should be prepared to spend a lot of time at the job. "People who say it takes too much of their time should not take over," he says.

This fall, four more trustees will be elected to the board, bringing the total number of representatives, including seven trustees, officers, to 19 for the next term. Drayton Valley and Stony Plain are also new eligible to elect a trustee to the board.

Don Gylender, Executive trustee, says he will not run to make a decision whether he will run again. Mr. Gylender, who has served on the board for 10 years, says he will make a decision this week. Trustee Gary McClelland from Spruce Grove resigned from the board five years ago because he

French programs starting Sept. 1

Provincial Education Minister David King recently approved three new programs for French as a second language. These will be available in Alberta schools September 1, 1992.

A three-year high school program will be offered to students going into Grade 10, a six-year program will be offered to Grade 7 students and a seven-year program begins at Grade 4.

The programs of optional, are intended to increase the effectiveness of second language by offering greater quantity of contact with the language and more continuity in the programs offered to the various grade levels. One of the goals of the program is to provide an excellent learning and, in addition, to increase

Lougheed opposes federal tax on gas

"If the federal government wants to live from taxation, that will drive the price of gas up, and that will drive the price of gas up, and that will drive the price of gas up," he said.

Mr. Lougheed went on to attack Mr. Trudeau's plan for a new constitution, and said that any constitution made by Ottawa would simply be window dressing. "The most important changes to the constitution on their own, but nothing of any substance can be done without the concurrence of the provinces, and in a few short months, we would be back to the status quo," he said.

Mr. Lougheed also defended himself to several people that other Canadians have about Albertans, the "big and most important" being that they are rich. "That is a totally false misconception about this province and might I point out that we are still behind Ontario in terms of per capita income," he said.

"Our heritage has not made us rich, but that is still less than a week of federal spending." The second night that Mr. Lougheed sought to dispel was one that said Canada could become energy self-sufficient merely by conserving its supplies.

The geographical and climatic factors of this country make it nearly impossible to rely on conservation to make self-sufficiency, we must look to develop other sources of energy, and be particular the oil made reserves that we have," he said. Another misconception that the rest of the country has about Alberta is that the province is rich, and that 70 per cent of the Westerners pulled recently said they considered themselves Westerners first and Canadians second, Mr. Lougheed said that the federal government cannot hope to understand the problems facing Western Canada.

"There is no province in Canada that has contributed more to the underdeveloped colleges of the world than Alberta," he said. Pointing to the holdings of regionalism that persist throughout Canada, and the fact that 70 per cent of the Westerners pulled recently said they considered themselves Westerners first and Canadians second, Mr. Lougheed said that the federal government cannot hope to understand the problems facing Western Canada.

"There is no province in Canada that has contributed more to the underdeveloped is planned for the September 8 weekend in Edmonton. The Drayton Valley Chamber is planning to pay for hotel rooms for local residents who attend the session.

A fall-er-er dinner meeting is October in Drayton Valley for all municipal councillors at which Mr. Chamber has volunteered to be guest speaker.

A normal daily drive which will follow the October dinner.

A couple of projects discussed by Chamber members with Mr. Chamber including an entrance sign for Drayton Valley, attendance at national and provincial Chamber of Commerce meetings, and a pamphlet or booklet promoting the town of Drayton Valley. "The showed us how we could do it," said Mr. Chamber, the president of the Chamber last week.

Mr. Chamber gave two transducers ideas and said he would help at all along the way," added Mr. Chamber. Mr. Chamber has shared the use of his conference room and office facilities to the local Chamber.

The Chamber and the 1992 anniversary of the Chamber have been successful and brought in money, said Mr. Chamber. The Chamber is also planning to increase membership from the current $5 to $10. "Our intention is to use all the money and put it back into Drayton Valley," said Mr. Chamber.

The Chamber could do a lot of things for the town, he added. It could represent the business community on many issues, it could help bring facilities "we don't have" to the town and could be an effective lobbying force on the provincial government.

"The initial phase is to organize ourselves," concluded Mr. Chamber.

"There will be no problem to get people to join the Chamber if we do something meaningful," affirmed Mr. Chamber. There are many things it can do, he said, such as push for an oil school in town, save light pollution or "get after the province to discontinue some of its programs your way," or promote the tourist potential of the town.

A few years ago—in the late 1980s—"there was a lot of spirit in Drayton Valley," said Mr. Chamber. "It's a darn good thing that we're not there now."

"People will participate and do something if there is a viable objective," he said.

So you think you can ride, eh?

We all like a quick trip on a fast motorcycle, don't we? And we all know the safe and proper way to operate a motorcycle, don't we? Or do we? For those of us who don't, the provincial department of transportation is sponsoring a motorcycle operator skill test, which will be held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week at the Dinosaur Plains parking lot. The only requirements to take part in the test are a properly equipped, street-legal motorcycle, and a valid Class 6 operators license.

Representatives of QCTV Channel 10 were in Dryden Valley last week and agreed to remove and repair damage caused by their contractors when filming while in residential areas.

The town of Dryden Valley had sent a number of letters to the company complaining workers for the company had been negligent in restoring property to its original state.

Repairs have come to the town of workers driving over lawns, not restoring dishes, leaving piles of dirt behind and not clearing streets after while was laid.

Gordon Chedoke, QCTV

director of engineering, was in town last week and agreed "some restoration work wasn't done to our standards."

A number of areas require clean-up and we are asking our people to be a bit more careful. He added that heavy rain was responsible for some of the delay in restoration.

Canoeists find body miles downstream

A man's body was found by canoeists last Saturday afternoon on the North Saskatchewan River near the Grouse bridge, say RCMP.

The body is believed to be that of Daniel Siergie, 30, of Dryden Valley who had been missing since a swimming accident on July 20.

Positive identification has not yet been determined, says Sgt. Aaron Zehner. The body was found 23 miles downstream of Dryden Valley.

Canoeists found the body early Saturday afternoon and relayed the information to Thibault police.

Mr. Siergie was swimming with two friends near the North Saskatchewan River bridge three weeks ago when the current proved too strong for him. He was last seen going under the bridge on July 20.

One accident breeds another

Curiosity has been known to harm a cat or two, but last week in Dryden Valley it claimed another sort of victim.

RCMP were at the scene of a minor accident last Friday which occurred on 80th Avenue near Industrial road, when a motorist rolled his car.

Another passing motorist was so intent on watching the accident, that he ran head on into another car in front of him, according to police.

The driver in the first accident has been charged with dangerous driving. The motorist involved in the second accident has been charged with driving left of the centre line.

The motorist received minor injuries.

Staking claims in B.C.

Mayor's trip rich in experience only

By Joyce Ouellette
Mayor Morris Lalrambe came back to Drayton Valley last week with hardware, money and enough gold to cover a 25 cent piece after spending a month staking claims in north-western British Columbia.

"I've got enough gold to cover a quarter—if I stretch it around a bit," she said last week.

And Mrs. Lalrambe says she has enough money to make a trip to the three claims she and her sister staked near Atlin, B.C.

Mrs. Lalrambe says she and her sister only staked claims because most of the time was occupied with staking claims. But she adds it was good to be "in the gold game," even though nearly all the area's mineral production fell during the four weeks they were there.

The sisters hunted the government office in Atlin, reading geologists' reports and the area and learned the names of other people holding suggestions and permits of gold from the area.

"Then they acquired their 'patent' applications," she said.

There is an abundance of gold in the Atlin area, she adds. "We saw lots of money, especially. Walking back from the last claim at 11:30 at night, I saw lots of money—which turned out to be big black pieces of two stamps."

The area is heavily staked with claims, said Mrs.

Lalrambe says she and her sister stayed in a cabin owned by a friend at the foot of Mount St. Helens. "There are numerous 'Gold Watch' signs posted about," she says. Lalrambe, similar to the Royal Crest Watch program.

But the people in Atlin are very friendly, she says. "I had my eye and only had the names of some friends in the area."

Service clubs look for new members

By Dale Leman
With the summer months behind them, the various service clubs in Drayton Valley are preparing for another season of activity, and although no new membership drives are planned, the clubs are always on the lookout for new members.

Joe Tarnoff, president of the Drayton Valley Rotary Club, says the group will be looking for members, but will welcome any new blood.

"We have nothing open-ended planned so far as memberships are concerned, but we are always looking to get new members," Mr. Tarnoff says.

Unlike the two other major clubs in town, the Lions and Elks, the Rotary Club meets throughout the summer months, planning activities which will include students and handicapped.

"One of our past major projects, in conjunction with the Legion, was the purchase of the bus for use by the handicapped," he says.

Linked by the membership of the club (membership usually stands at 11), Mr. Tarnoff says the Rotarians also wish to smaller projects.

"We had high school students to Ottawa for junior citizenship training; to Lehighburg for senior agricultural training; and to the Industrial Heartland of Ontario to experience the industrialization of that province."

Last year, the club held a model train set that involved the senior citizens, and provided funds to the seniors, and this year the Rotary Club will again be sponsoring a Birthday Celebration.

The Birthday Calendar is kind of a special project for us in that it develops a kind of community feeling amongst those who make use of it," Mr. Tarnoff says.

Rotarians, carpenters and special events are listed on the calendar, and any group or individual may buy copies on it, he notes.

New heating plan for Albertans

The Minister of Utilities and Telephones, Larry B. Bosh, announced Aug. 18 a new, two-part heating price protection package for Albertans.

The first part is a revised Natural Gas Price Protection Plan, effective Aug. 1, 1980, to replace the old price protection program currently in force.

A new Remote Area Heating Allowance will come into effect on Oct. 1, 1980, for residents of Alberta who do not have access to a natural gas distribution system, and therefore must use propane or fuel oil for heating purposes. Necessary legislation is to be introduced during the upcoming fall session of the legislature.

The new pricing arrangement for the Natural Gas Price Protection Plan will establish the basic cost of natural gas to consumers at a supported price equal to 85 per cent of the Alberta Border Price, which is currently $1.88 per thousand cubic feet. The plan will absorb the differential between the support price and the actual price charged for gas by the producer.

Natural gas consumers in Alberta will receive total benefits under the plan in excess of $1 billion by the end of this new arrangement on March 31, 1986. Under the old price protection plan, established in 1975, estimates of Alberta received benefits of approximately $800 million. The amount of the rebate was most recently calculated on the basis of provincial government subsidies the support price and the actual price charged for gas by the producer.

The new program was designed for greater simplicity of operation, and will be a combination of the one billion cubic feet per year of propane oil supply to consumers maximum.

Imperial counters federal report

Imperial Oil's 1979 record investment in performance was not reflected by a federal government report issued August 18, J.A. Armstrong, the company's chairman and chief executive officer said last week.

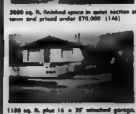

"In the critical area of development in energy development," said Armstrong, "the industry averages quoted by the report on revenues, profits and investments in the Canadian petroleum industry were not representative of Imperial's record."

"Imperial's one the percentage of cash flow invested in petroleum development increased from 84 per cent in 1979 to 95 per cent last year. In fact, 97 per cent of Imperial's investment in petroleum development in 1979 were reinvested, virtually all of them in energy-related projects. Total investment amounted to a record of $979 million, of which $113 million went to petroleum development, $115 million to coal and uranium, and the remainder was invested in basic metals exploration and development."

Ceasars coast to 5-2 victory

(C.A.L.) action on Sunday. The Flyers, with the win, maintained their three-point lead over the Ceasars, with only four games left to play in the season.

on the weekend. The Flyers, with the win, maintained their three-point lead over the Ceasars, with only four games left to play in the season.

Jim Turley opened the scoring early for the Ceasars, scoring what playing coach Dave Beasley described as a "Jim Turley special."

"It seems that all his goals are the lucky kind," Beasley said. Turley's shot bounced off the head of a Spruce Grove defender, and looped over the head of the keeper, just grazing the under-side of the crossbar.

The Ceasars took a 5-0 lead on the first important moment in the game, as we watched a crossing pass from Beasley find the team goal.

Bowen is not a teammate of Beasley's and the two played high school soccer together in Edmonton. We were short of players for this game, so we had to pull in a few extras to make a team," Beasley noted.

Coach knocks 'win or else' attitude

"It's not a justifiable statement at all," says Taylor. MacPherson also defends himself against the charges.

"I don't consider myself to be a win or else coach," says Taylor. "I consider myself to be a win or else coach."

A member of the Drayton Valley Ceasars has charged the Leduc Flyers in general, and two players in particular, of using dirty tactics and bargaining the original intent of the Central Alberta Soccer League (C.A.S.L.).

"Basically there are two practitioners that have caused a lot of the problems," says Dave Beasley, playing coach for the Ceasars. Beasley points the finger of guilt at high-scoring Flyer Angus McPherson and team captain John Bullis.

"The Ceasars have backed their protests against league-leading Leduc's tactics by springing out of the Knoch-Ost Cup championships in September and have considered renouncing themselves from the league."

"In the C.A.S.L. it is supposed to be a recreational league. We're not playing for money, we're just playing for fun."

Beasley maintains his team is not the only one behaving disrespectfully against the Flyers.

"I've spoken in private with every team in the league. It is just not how to play Leduc. It's win at all costs," Beasley said during a telephone interview Wednesday.

"The C.A.S.L. is supposed to be a recreational league. We're not playing for money, we're just playing for fun."

Seniors in view as Games open

The stage is set for the 1980 Alberta Anniversary Seniors Games—Canada's first ever. The City of Camrose (pop. 11,000) and almost 600 seniors are taking the limelight.

Development in the theme of the Seniors Games. An estimated 10,000 Albertans over the age of 55 have participated in local and area productions leading to the games which start tomorrow. Volunteer organizations work with the games has inspired many of the seniors who may not have become involved in sport or cultural events offered through the games.

"Many seniors don't belong to recreational clubs," they want to do other things — to feel more productive. This occupation (organizing the games) suits them," says 65-year-old Ed Perley, the Camrose Seniors Games chairman. Mr. Perley, a retired local publisher, oversees the Camrose Seniors Games Society with 10 appointed volunteer directors and their assistance. Administration duties are handled entirely by seniors with the rest of the board ranging in age from 55 to 75. Eight seniors located across Alberta as Seniors Representatives have also been successful working with younger men and women to organize productions.

Another key to the games' organizing machinery is the Alberta Seniors Citizens Sport and Recreation Association.

Response good in Zone 5

The land, area, and some play-offs have now been completed and our seniors are preparing for the competition, fun and quantity of the Seniors Games in Camrose from August 21 to 25.

The response to play-offs over the past two months has been excellent throughout most of Zone 5. Over 70 play-offs at the level, some at more level were hosted by seniors organizations, leagues or recreation departments. Almost 1,000 participants were registered for these play-offs to fill the 113 positions on the same team going to Camrose, where they will compete in 10 events ranging from bridge and darts to basketball and tennis.

These 1980 Alberta Anniversary Seniors Games are a first, not only for Alberta, but for Canada and are a special 1980 anniversary project, co-ordinated by Alberta Games.

Judging by the high rate of response to men and women and the anticipation for a highly successful Games event in Camrose, it might be concluded that this may not be a one time event.

Local area winners in Drayton Valley include Paul Pichonowski in chess, Edith Craig in croquet, WSL

Steno in horseshoes, Edith Norquay in performing arts, Walter Zentgraf in shuffleboard, Adeline Duckett in darts, and Lou Tucker in golf.

Only one birthday girl for senior citizen party

By Edith Norquay
On August 11, we had our regular birthday party. There were three tables. High for the ladies was Peggy Rose. We are glad to have the home back with us. Adeline Duckett had the low.

High for the men was Harry Tweedle and low was Ed Robinson.
August 13 was the seniors birthday party, but we had only one birthday girl—Edith Craig.

She wasn't too handsome since everyone spent out at the table with her.

Adeline and Fred were away picking chickens. Albie they came back, the Ducketts and the Norquays.

went to the Legion and played darts.
On August 14, we had our whist drive. The high for the ladies was Blanche Jensen. The low was Anna Pichonowski.

The high for the men was a tie between Ed Norquay and Ed Robinson. Low was Ed Robinson. We had four tables.

Vacation Bible school closes

By Margaret Robt.
545-5433

The Lutheran and Baptist churches joined forces to hold a Duty Vacation Bible School each morning from July 28 to Aug. 1 at the Baptist Church.

Approximately 40 children attended classes organized by Beth Kuehn and Pastor Herbert Lamb. Lamb was in charge of the programs. Rachel Gaydar was the song leader and Penny Brandt the pianist.

The classes for the four to eight-year-olds were led by Margaret Robt., Penny Brandt and Rachel Gaydar. Rachel Gaydar and Penny Brandt supervised the nine to 12-year-olds. Devan Gaydar and Cheryl Kuehn looked after the drinks, cookies and games.

A closing program was enjoyed by the children, families and friends on July 31.

A bridal shower was held in the Legion Hall on July 27 in honor of Cheryl Kuehn. Hostesses and assistants were Val Johnston, Kay and Corinne Snow, Dulcie and Debbie Grant, Mary Elsie, Mable Marshall and Rose Gellert.

Valuing at the home of Walter Kay were Bob and Beulah Perrell and their daughter Raylene from Long View, Wash.

Obituary: Mary Rita (Gatz) Johnson was born at Delago City, Kansas, on Aug. 24, 1905. She came to Canada with her mother, stepfather, two brothers and one sister in 1928.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Buffalo, ran the Aladdin store from 1929 to 1930. Betty and Walter Kay were married on Oct. 17, 1928. They lived on their farm east of Warburg until returning to the village in 1932.

Betty had been a member of the Women's Institute for a number of years until she fell on the farm and sustained a fracture of her hip.

Betty had also been an active member of the Senior Citizens' Club in Warburg. Betty was in the University Hospital at the time of her death.

Prayer service was held at 8 p.m. on July 29 and the funeral service was held in the Warburg United Church on July 31 with

Motor vehicle accidents are leading cause of death

By Bob Turner

You know that motor vehicle accidents kill more people under 40 than either heart attacks or cancer? That over 1,500 men, women and children died on our nation's highways in 1977? That this death toll is increasing?

Even more tragic than these figures is the fact that most of these deaths are preventable. They can be prevented by observing three simple precautions:

• Do not drive after drinking.

• Drive at or under maximum speed limits.

• Drive with safety belts buckled.

It is ironic to find these simple life saving practices so widely ignored by many of the same people who have given up smoking, exercise regularly and who have reduced cholesterol intake in an effort to improve their well being and prolong their lives.

Risky maneuvers directed at drivers have had some effect but not enough. Our attitudes toward driving are flawed up with the mind.

Our attitudes toward driving are flawed up with the mind. Our attitudes toward driving are flawed up with the mind.

Our attitudes toward driving are flawed up with the mind. Our attitudes toward driving are flawed up with the mind.

Report on sexuality causes furor

There hasn't been this much controversy in the United Church's national offices since the 1973 liberation social celebrating the Church's 100th anniversary, reported the United Church Observer in last June's issue.

The commission was the storm of protest from church members over the Church's Division of Mission task force report on human sexuality.

"Unsettled," "derivative," "disgraceful," were some of the adjectives used as church members described their feelings about media coverage of the still undebated report. The media had a field day, treating the controversy with banner headlines.

At the storm's centre is the 100-page "The Unity—Male and Female" which was presented Aug. 13 at the United Church of Canada's 100th General Council meeting in Halifax, Nova Scotia, Aug. 13 to 26.

General Council is being asked to approve the task force report for study and then to recommend the church with a view to developing a policy statement on human sexuality for the 100th General Council.

"Our sexuality is a gift of God's grace and blessing," says the report in its introduction.

about human sexuality, the report says, "we often see that previously held ideas have come more from Man than from God."

The Church, it says, must investigate these new facts into its teaching, "taking care they are based and not dogmatically imposed."

As it anticipated the reaction of some church members to the report, it calls for "support and nurturing" of those who cannot accept what appear to be radical departures from previously held beliefs.

On marriage, for example, the report says adultery should not be regarded automatically as a reason to end a marriage.

The Unity or lack of Unity in the marriage union should be seen in its much more encompassing meaning.

Logically, the report adds, it is not the act of sexual intercourse with a new person but the quality of the relationship that would mean to pass the threat to a marriage.

However, the report adds, it is upon the actual act that the word fidelity has come to focus, and this more limited concept of fidelity is so deeply ingrained that the offended spouse feels obliged to be outraged by the partner's emotional sexual involvement.

On homosexuality, the report says there is no reason in principle why "nature, self-accepting homosexuality" should not be ordained in the ministry.

At the same time, it acknowledges that while nature, the church does not have the authority to bless a homosexual relationship, based on biblical interpretation, it says, means there is much lost of homosexuality.

The report also says there is no valid justification for excluding homosexuals as priests. Children nurtured by homosexuals, it says, will not automatically adopt the preferences of their surrogate or natural parents.

Stephen and Ben

On the church and the single parent, the report suggests it falls down to one question:

Can the Church accept that a sexual relationship, including sexual intercourse, marked by genuine caring and mutual respect, by itself is not permanent commitment, is based and right and worthy and not just a fling?

There is an increased number of persons in society, the report points out, who are by many means single. These people, it says, need to be recognized and accepted by society, as well as by the church, and as persons in their own right.

On remarriage, the report says, "the church should be prepared to welcome the remarriage of persons who have been divorced and who are now seeking a new marriage."

From Peggy's Pen

By Peggy Murray

Not having a vegetable garden this year I miss the first fresh lettuce and radishes.

However, the radishes I raise are usually a total loss. They come up woody and/or weeny most of the time. The lettuce is usually a killing pest for miserable slugs.

I guess there are advantages to not having a garden. We have saved a new carrot around the garden spot and are getting the kids in and later it will be a yard for the slugs and later we will have the pigs worth the soil.

Just put pick green and weeds here and there, the slugs do a better job of eating the grass close to the ground and the pigs really cultivate the ground. Of course they all fertilize the soil, in a few years I will have built the garden plot and raise another vegetable garden.

It is travelling around the nearby districts, we allow most people who are getting to sell off a certain amount of their garden produce. This year I didn't raise any radishes for the freezer but a neighbor has over 1,000 lbs. in raising for market. For a pound, around and ready for the freezer, I can stand up with real home-grown radishes and not feel like I'm giving them that fresh flavor.

With three goats to butcher, a couple of pigs, some chickens and country grown vegetables, we'll live the things all winter.

Carrots offered for sale in the super markets don't seem to have the same flavor as home-grown ones. I think it is because they are so sterile. Packaged in plastic and washed clean they don't taste the same as those pulled from a country garden. I suppose they must have the clean soil on them in order to give them that fresh flavor.

Bought some red country corn on the cob last week. Baked or steamed and just tender, corn is delicious when eaten with butter dripping down on hands and feet. Corn on the cob is definitely not as elegant dish, it has to be eaten in the company of friends.

Yes, not having a garden does have its advantages. Keep the weeds of the harvest without having all the weeding, cultivating and hard work that goes with raising vegetables. It is a

No solution to credit card conundrum

By Jason Burger

Probably, I don't understand what goes on behind the scenes but I know that you can get a credit card in one of two ways.

Either you fit in force and with a bank. Or it comes out of the bank and is in the bank and in the bank.

To keep the card healthy, you must have to pay the "balance" now, which is listed on a statement once a month.

Where the money goes or how they get it from the bank accounts often seems to be of the province to the store where I make my purchases is immaterial to me. They must know what they are doing or as I thought last August 1.

This is the latest day when I found that the computer had deleted me. It started when I listed through a bank of direct structure company and deleted a bank number 10 was a bank. I gave the company and our Mastercard credit card.

Playing by the Rules

I had no reason to believe. The previous week we had gotten a statement from last office dated July 31.

I handed up for a payment in full of $25.36 and stated that our new balance was "0". The computer also had deleted, "There is a bank, Mastercard, or Bank of America insurance and back to school specials. Just my charge." Like a well-programmed computer I was hitting orders and playing by the rules.

When I returned home very quiet, I knew, "How, you always a hypocrite," he said again. "You know how you always a hypocrite to pay bills and long your credit rating. Well, you should practice what you preach."

"That's right," he said again. "You know how you always a hypocrite to pay bills and long your credit rating. Well, you should practice what you preach."

"That's right," he said again. "You know how you always a hypocrite to pay bills and long your credit rating. Well, you should practice what you preach."

"That's right," he said again. "You know how you always a hypocrite to pay bills and long your credit rating. Well, you should practice what you preach."

"That's right," he said again. "You know how you always a hypocrite to pay bills and long your credit rating. Well, you should practice what you preach."

"That's right," he said again. "You know how you always a hypocrite to pay bills and long your credit rating. Well, you should practice what you preach."

"A payment for what?" I asked. "I don't have to pay for the bank but I don't understand the end of this."

"A payment for your overdraw account," he replied. I showed him our statement with a balance of "0.00" and got this statement. This is the story he told.

"When he got to the check out with the bank and my card, the girl said, 'I'm sorry, you name is on the list. I'll have to check with the manager.'"

He stood there for a long time waiting. Then she returned and said smilingly, "We'll take this one through, but you'll have to start paying on your card."

"You said that people living?" I said.

"Yes," said the girl.

Now, he was out but I wasn't. I called up Mastercard. The manager was out but the lady who answered said we were on the list of people with overdraw accounts. "They can't be," I said. "We paid $25.36 on July 31, over a month ago, and haven't changed a thing since."

The problem was a letter of apology when I contacted, but never said for my name or address as I knew this was a letter. I called for the phone number of the head office.

I hardly slept all night. What's happened? I wondered. Why are we on the list? Does the credit bureau have us on the list, or had I paid? All of our credit cards have this problem.

In the credit bureau, with initials what I've told him he had in a pull a sentence with whole again just to carry enough cash to get all possible payments.

In the morning I called the head office number the girl had given me. "The number you have called is not in service at the moment," I was told. The number on the credit card statement called. "I am sorry but we cannot contact the number," the disconnected voice in Winnipeg said.

"That's right," he said again. "You know how you always a hypocrite to pay bills and long your credit rating. Well, you should practice what you preach."

"That's right," he said again. "You know how you always a hypocrite to pay bills and long your credit rating. Well, you should practice what you preach."

"That's right," he said again. "You know how you always a hypocrite to pay bills and long your credit rating. Well, you should practice what you preach."

I called the local Mastercard office. He did not apologize but explained how things work.

Every two months they get a list of customers from head office, a grade is called, it being everyone whose account is overdrawn. On the statement of July 31, the last they got, we were listed as having an overdraw account of $1,000.00.

"July 18 we owed one dollar and July 5 we paid up in full," I said. "I had it."

My payment must have just arrived then, he said. Their statement was wrong two weeks before. It takes one month to be processed by one (which means my payment was processed by July 5, and the statement came July 18 - I don't get it, but anyway, that's his explanation).

Computer mistakes

He also said that when lists are run by computers, mistakes are bound to occur. He can't say any way around it. He said, he said, he had difficulty with ChargeMaster when he came out on a list but for two weeks before someone of a similar name had had credit cards.

Our name is only on the list and has not gone to the big credit bureau listing in fact, he seemed sure. It is also admitted there is no way of preventing lists from happening again. In fact, it will undoubtedly happen again.

One must accept computer error as largely as one must accept human error, but certainly helpful.

I hang up, completely disheartened with the whole credit system. You can't trust machines after all. Computers are not machines. Why you know you can go on paying your account off every single month and never miss a payment, and still lose your credit rating?

I get a pair of scissors. Who sends credit cards away? "That's right," he said again. "You know how you always a hypocrite to pay bills and long your credit rating. Well, you should practice what you preach."

We may not like the system. We may not trust the machine. But he claims we'll lose our credit rating. He'll lose our credit rating.

Admittedly I know you're right. Yes, the machine is lovely. No, we never get a letter of apology.

"That's right," he said again. "You know how you always a hypocrite to pay bills and long your credit rating. Well, you should practice what you preach."

"That's right," he said again. "You know how you always a hypocrite to pay bills and long your credit rating. Well, you should practice what you preach."

"That's right," he said again. "You know how you always a hypocrite to pay bills and long your credit rating. Well, you should practice what you preach."

New laws for pesticide approved

Last month, the Alberta government introduced two sets of new regulations under the Alberta Agriculture and Forestry Act.

The new legislation replaces the original regulations under the Agricultural Chemicals Act that were introduced in 1970. At that time, agriculture was the main user of pesticide chemicals in Alberta. Since then, the use of pesticides has increased dramatically. The new regulations provide for the licensing of dealers and training of their employees. A system of classifying pesticides according to human health and environmental hazards is introduced.

New restrictions that govern the use, handling, transport and storage of the more hazardous compounds are included.

A permit system for the use of pesticides in the Green Zones (hazardous areas) of Alberta is introduced.

A complete set of rules for structural fumigation is designed to regulate fumigation under the Public Health Act.

The number of classes of commercial pesticide applications has been increased from 13 to 18, reflecting the increased use of pesticides in the province.

However, insurance or third coverage must now be more closely related to the activities of the pesticide applicator. These new regulations will be reviewed and expanded in future years of "updates." If you have questions about the new regulations, you are encouraged to contact the Pesticide Chemical Branch, Pesticides Control Division, 8023-108 St., Edmonton, Alta.

Birthday bales sent to Saskatchewan

In a gesture reminiscent of the early pioneer spirit, Alberta farmers are sending a birthday cake to the Saskatchewan branch of the Manitoba District of Elkhart.

Alberta farmers, who received their first birthday cake in 1970, are trying to help their drought-stricken counterparts in Saskatchewan by sending birthday cakes to them. At that time, Alberta was the only province in Canada that was not hit by the drought.

The various kind of rain in Saskatchewan has created a desperate situation for the farmers there. Without sufficient rain, many Saskatchewan farmers were unable to harvest their grain or to plant their crops.

Not only will the Alberta branch be helping out the Saskatchewan branch, but they will be helping out the Saskatchewan branch of the Manitoba District of Elkhart.

The committee sent to the farmers of Alberta and asked them to "send" 10 "bales" of hay to the Saskatchewan branch. The bales are made of hay and straw, and are used for feeding livestock.

The bales are made of hay and straw, and are used for feeding livestock. The bales are made of hay and straw, and are used for feeding livestock.

It is not surprising for all concerned to discover that it is the growing industry and isolation of the modern farmer. In hard times, he can still recall and call upon that helping hand of his father, perhaps "pioneer spirit."
